

Below is "The Tailor and The Elephant" In the evening, the elephant would go to a pond every day to take a dip. On the way to the pond, the elephant used to stop at a tailor's shop and raise his trunk to greet the shop owner. The tailor used to offer bananas to the elephant every day. The elephant used to thank the tailor by raising his trunk, gulping the banana down, and then walking away.

One day the tailor was not in a good mood, as he had a quarrel with a customer. In the evening, when the elephant came to greet the tailor and stretched his trunk to collect a banana, the tailor pricked the elephant with a needle. The elephant cried in pain while the tailor laughed loudly.